THE FORTY-SECOND REPORT
OF
THE DEPUTY KEEPER OF THE PUBLIC RECORDS.

---

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

I RESPECTFULLY beg leave to submit to Your Majesty, my Annual Report of the proceedings in the Public Record Office, for the year 1880.

I. FAC-SIMILES OF NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, &c.,
BY PROCESS OF PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY, &c.

The operations have been further continued during 1880, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, where Mr. William Basevi Sanders, Assistant Keeper of the Public Records, is stationed. Further details of the operations upon the Anglo-Saxon Charters and other Works will be found in Mr. Sanders' Report for 1880, submitted to Your Majesty in the Appendix (No. 5). Mr. Sanders has also made a Calendar and Index to the Close Rolls, 4 & 5 Edw. I.

II. CALENDARS AND TRANSCRIPTS.

The progress made in the Calendars during the year is also mentioned in § VIII.

A further portion of the Calendar of Exchequer Depositions, for the reign of George II., is annexed to this Report (Appendix No. 1).

In Appendix No. 2 will be found the Second and concluding Part of a Calendar of the Norman Rolls of the reign of Henry V., commencing with the Rolls of the seventh year, in continuation of a Volume published by the late Record Commissioners in 1835, entitled "Rotuli Normanniæ in Turri Londinensi asservati," edited by the late Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, and completing the portion submitted to Your Majesty in my Forty-First Report

Q 3185. Wt. 9710.

(Appendix I. No. 2). The Calendar in these two Reports is for the years 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 Henry V., bringing the series down to the year 1422, when the Norman Rolls cease. It has been prepared by Mr. A. C. Ewald, a Senior Clerk in this Office, who has added a Glossary of obsolete French words on the Norman Rolls.

In the Appendix to the present Report (No. 3) is submitted to Your Majesty, a portion of the Calendar of the Patent Rolls in the Public Record Office, being for the first year of the reign of Edward I., calendared and arranged by Mr. Frank Scott Haydon, the Senior Clerk in the Department. An introduction to the Calendar is prefixed, giving an account of former operations upon this important class of Records, and elucidating various points of legal and antiquarian interest, of History and Biography.

The Appendix (No. 4) to the present Report contains a List of the Lords Lieutenant of Counties in England and Wales, for the short reign of James II. The List is principally curious, as showing the changes that took place in those important Officers in the third and last years of the reign, chiefly on account of the religious views of that Monarch.

Of the Calendars of State Papers printed for sale (of which 110 volumes have been published), five volumes were published, and 699 volumes sold, in 1880, making a total of 12,123 volumes of the series sold. The present state of these Calendars will be found in the Appendix (No. 7). The volumes published in 1880 were :—

(1.) The Fifth Volume of the Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, being those relating to America and the West Indies, from the years 1661 to 1668, edited by Mr. William Noel Sainsbury, a Senior Clerk in the Public Record Office, containing nearly 2,000 abstracts of documents. The following divisions of the Papers have been made :—1. The American Colonies, Charles II.; 2. The Colonial Possessions in America; 3. The Colonies in the West Indies; 4. The African Colonies, on the Gold Coast, the Gambia, &c. Under these heads the principal events within the period of the volume are noticed.

(2.) The Eleventh Volume of the Calendar of State Papers, Foreign Series, of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, for the years 1575, 1576, to June 1577, inclusive, edited by Mr. Allan James Crosby, Barrister-at-Law, a Senior Clerk in the Public Record Office. The contents of the Volume relate entirely to Foreign Affairs. In France, the troubles on account of Religion still continued, the Huguenots being in strong force in the South of France. The chief interest of the Volume centres in the Documents relating to Flanders, the Religious quarrels between the Prince of Orange and the Spanish King, and the determination of the former to shake off the Spanish Rule.

(3.) The Sixteenth Volume of the Calendar of State Papers, Domestic Series, of the reign of Charles I., April to August 1640, edited by Mr. William Douglas Hamilton, a Senior Clerk in the Public Record Office. The events calendared in this Volume commence with the general election for the fourth Parliament of Charles I., commonly called the "Short Parliament," from having sat only three weeks; with the quarrels between the English and Scots; the affairs of the Earl of Strafford, &c.

(4.) The Fifth Volume of the Calendar of Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, of the reign of Henry VIII., for the years 1531 and 1532, edited by Mr. James Gairdner, Assistant Keeper of the Public Records. This is the first volume of the State Papers of Henry VIII. which has been published since the death of the Rev. J. S. Brewer, who edited the former volumes, 1 to 4. Mr. Gairdner had been united, from the commencement of the Calendar of that reign, with Mr. Brewer, in preparing and editing those Papers, and has succeeded to the Editorship of the Calendar, having the help of Mr. C. T. Martin, a Senior Clerk in this Office, who has assisted in the progress of the work during 18 years. The chief matter of interest in the present volume is the Divorce of Henry VIII. and Queen Katharine, their final parting taking place in July 1531, universal sympathy being felt for the Queen, and a strong feeling against Anne Boleyn.

(5.) The Fifth Volume of the Calendar of State Papers relating to Ireland, of the reign of James I., 1615-1625, being the conclusion of that reign, edited by the Rev. Dr. Russell and Mr. John P. Prendergast, Barrister-at-law. This Volume concludes the Calendars of Irish State Papers for the reign of James I. The publication was delayed through an accident to the Rev. Dr. Russell, who was thrown from his horse on 16 May 1877, and died from the effects of the fall on 26 February 1880. In the Volume are calendared important Papers concerning the Plantation of Ulster, &c.

Mr. Rawdon Brown has continued his Calendar of State Papers and Manuscripts relating to English affairs existing in the Archives and Libraries of Venice and Northern Italy. The Despatches from Spain are calendared in manuscript to 29 May 1561, and from France to 27 December 1560. The second part of Vol. VI. is in type to 12 February 1558. Mr. Brown transmitted to this Office during 1880 some further Transcripts of important Documents in the Archives of Venice and elsewhere, relating to British History, making a total of 120 similar Volumes transmitted.

Don Pascual de Gayangos has calendared the Spanish Papers to the end of the year 1533, but the Volume is not yet completed for publication.

Mr. William Henry Bliss has continued his researches in the Libraries and Secret Archives of Rome, and forwarded during 1880 some bundles of valuable Transcripts, making a total of 50 bundles sent in 1877, 1878, 1879, and 1880; these transcripts have been frequently consulted by searchers in the Public Record Office. Mr. Bliss has also made Reports of his proceedings at Rome and elsewhere.

M. Armand Baschet has continued his researches in the Public Libraries and Archives of Paris for Documents illustrative of British History, and made Reports of his proceedings. A collection of Transcripts was received from M. Baschet at the end of 1880, and a list of them is annexed to this Report (Appendix No. 6).

III. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

Three additional Volumes of this series were published in 1880, making a total of 163 Volumes already published; and 1,444 Volumes were sold, making a total of 36,385 Volumes sold. A list of the works published in 1880, and of those in progress at the end of that year, is given in the Appendix (No. 8).

IV. FEES: GOVERNMENT AND OTHER BUSINESS, &c.

The amount of Business in the Search Office, and of Fees received, in 1880, is as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
507 Copies - - -	284	12	6
235 Attendances - -	175	9	0
	<hr/>
	£460	1	6

The total amount of Fees received, and paid to the account of the Consolidated Fund, from 1840, is 29,701*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

The number of registered applications for Records in the Search Office by the Public, in 1880, was 32,211, each application being on an average for more than ten documents. These do not include the daily inquiries for information, which are verbally answered and disposed of. 31,297 membranes and leaves were stamped before their production to searchers, a regulation which cannot be dispensed with. This number is in addition to 15,324 membranes and leaves which were already stamped, and were reproduced, making a total of 51,081 membranes and leaves consulted by searchers in 1880.

The amount of work performed specially for Government Departments during 1880 is as follows:—

NUMBER of SEARCHES, INSPECTIONS, ISSUES, and RETURNS of GOVERNMENT PAPERS, for GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, in 1880.

Departments.	Number of Searches or Applications.	Number of Inspections, Issues, Returns, &c.
Treasury - - - - -	76	1,135
Home Office - - - - -	39	271
Foreign Office - - - - -	264	1,059
Colonial Office - - - - -	195	944
War Office - - - - -	495	5,985
Admiralty (Whitehall) - - - - -	226	2,480
„ (Registry) - - - - -	1	1
Lord Chamberlain's Office - - - - -	6	242
Board of Trade - - - - -	2	49
Paymaster General's Office - - - - -	3	80
Exchequer and Audit Office - - - - -	1	36
Patent Office - - - - -	85	105
Chancery - - - - -	2	2
Duchy of Lancaster - - - - -	1	1
Total - - - - -	1,396	12,390

The preceding table does not, however, give an adequate idea of the business transacted in the Public Record Office for Government Departments, inasmuch as searches for, and references to, the Documents wanted, often occupy many days; and long copies of Documents are frequently made for those Departments.

15,120 Books and Papers have been stamped before transmission to Government Departments. These are not included in the number stamped for searchers before mentioned.

The examination into the Documents belonging to the late Masters of the Court of Chancery has been continued as mentioned in former Reports. The new Rules and Regulations, pursuant to the Act 40 & 41 Vict. c. 55., are given in the Fortieth Report (§ I., and Appendix, Nos. 10 and 11). On 14 October 1879 the Master of the Rolls, pursuant to the Act 23 & 24 Vict. c. 149. s. 9., appointed Mr. William John Hardy to have the care of these Documents. The greater part of them still remain in the Office in Southampton Buildings, in the charge and superintendence of the Master of the Rolls in like manner as other Records under the Public Record Act of 1838, there not being room in the Record Repository to receive them. Some Documents and the Indexes have, however, been transferred to the Repository. 17 applications were made to inspect Documents in 1880; some have been refused. Several classes of Documents are being sorted, indexed, &c.

The assistance afforded by the Record Officers to the Historical Manuscripts Commission has been continued (Fortieth Report, § VI.); and repairs of some Documents for the Commission have been executed. The operations on the Duke of Manchester's Papers have been completed.

In the Fortieth Report (§ VI.) it is stated that Returns were in progress, for the Houses of Lords and Commons, of the names of Members of the House of Commons returned to serve in Parliament. The Returns are still in progress, and will occupy considerable time, as an Index to them is being compiled.

V. TRANSFERS AND REMOVALS.

Transfers of Documents have been made into this Office during the year 1880, from the Clerks of Records and Writs, Registrars' Office, Petty Bag Office, and the Enrolment Office, Chancery; the Admiralty, the Lord Chamberlain's Office, the Exchequer and Audit Office, the Treasury, Treasury Solicitor's Office, Foreign Office, and War Office; amounting to 132 rolls, 956 volumes, 1,539 bundles, parcels, portfolios, &c., and 3 dockets.

VI. ARRANGEMENT, REPAIRS, BINDING, AND SIMILAR OPERATIONS.

The important duties of repairing and arranging the Records have been carried on in the usual manner during the year, viz., 2,795 volumes and bundles have been arranged; 28 bundles, 1,994 rolls, 270 files, and 14,662 membranes and leaves, have been flattened; 19,629 membranes and leaves guarded; 3,844 membranes and 10,461 leaves repaired; 3 volumes, 399 membranes, and 2,048 leaves sewed; 10,222 membranes and leaves repaired by the process of sizing; 1,651 volumes and bundles, 3,629 membranes, and 10,804 leaves numbered; 13,038 volumes, bundles, and membranes stamped; 9,231 leaves collated; 2,425 bundles, &c., tied up; 106 volumes and bundles, 504 portfolios, 7,355 rolls, 580 files, and 2,204 bundles ticketed; 6,100 rolls, bundles, &c., dusted; other Papers incorporated with series to which they belong; 67 volumes bound, bindings repaired, &c.; slips of Indexes, &c., arranged alphabetically, &c.; lists of documents made, stitched, &c.

County, &c.	Date.	Term.	No.	Plaintiffs.	Defendants.	SUBJECT-MATTER.
						cocks are set together, after the long law of forty is told, and both refuse fighting for ten times, then a fresh cock is to be brought upon the pit, and to be set down to each of such cocks, and if one of such cocks fight such fresh cock, and the other cock doth refuse to fight, then the cock that shall so fight wins the battle, but if both such cocks fight such fresh cock, or if both refuse to fight such fresh cock, in either of the said cases it is a drawn battle, and in case ten pounds be offered to five shillings, and no person accepts the wager, then the hander of the cock on whose side the said odds are offered accounts forty, and if no person accepts the said offer, then the battle is won by the cock on which the said odds are offered, and he is immediately taken away, and if the wager be taken, then the hander follows accounting as before mentioned, in the same manner as if no such bett had been laid, and the cock refusing ten times is the losing cock, and in case any cock be taken away without the hander accounting ten times, and on such accounting refuse ten times, such cock so taken away loseth the battle. "To the fifth interrogatory, this deponent saith that he was at Bishop Auckland, in the county of Durham, on the 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, and 22nd Aug. 1746, when a match or main of cocks was fought between the complainant Thomas Cust and the defendant Martin Dunn; that he was present when the said match was fought, all the time of fighting, and was feeder and hander on the part of the complainant all the time; that the said main or match consisted of nineteen battles, and ten thereof was won by the complainant and nine by the defendant Dunn; that the rules, orders, and methods of cockfighting was truly observed by him, this witness, for and on the part of the said complainant, in such manner before by him in his deposition to the fourth interrogatory mentioned, during the course of the said battles, and such rules as have been always observed by all parties in all mains where this deponent hath been concerned; that he this deponent hath been feeder for the last twelve years in the most considerable matches and mains fought in the north, and the rules by him, this deponent, observed in the main fought at Bishop Auckland on the 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, and 22nd days of August 1746, were the same rules by which all mains were determined wherever he, this deponent, hath in any manner been concerned; saith that the transactions of the defendant Dunn, who feed and handed the cocks at the said match, were unfair in many instances, particularly in the seventh battle of the said main; that he, this deponent, had counted twice or three times ten, which number he cannot particularly remember; that the complainant's cock fought; that said Dunn pushed his cock upon the complainant's cock unfairly, and began to account from said two or three, although the said Dunn's cock, according to his appearance to this deponent, was actually dead or dying, and took his cock away, upon which this witness, for the satisfaction of all parties, fetched a fresh cock, and turned him down to his cock that was then upon the pit unken away, and his cock immediately fought such fresh cock. "To the sixth interrogatory, this deponent saith that he was present on the twentieth day of August, in the year 1746, in the forenoon, when a battle was fought in the main between a red dunm cock belonging to the plaintiff Cust, and a yellow winged gray cock belonging to the defendant Dunn; that very soon after the setting the cocks down the complainant's red dunm cock knocked down the defendant Dunn's yellow winged gray cock, and had greatly the advantage over the defendant Dunn's cock, in so much that ten pounds was laid on the part of the complainant's cock to five shillings on the part of the defendant Dunn's cock; that upon the said ten pounds to five shillings being wagered, this deponent, according to the usual and known rule, accounted forty, and accounted either twice or three times ten, which he cannot set forth; that then the defendant Dunn pretended that his cock had fought begun accounting, and said upon the first setting to three or four times, refused, and brought his cock unfairly to and pushed him upon the complainant's, hastily accounting the number ten, not distinctly so as to be understood, and in such manner as is usual for handers to account ten, and hastily took his cock away, which unfair transaction this witness complained of to the gentlemen then present, who (to no purpose) spoke to the defendant Dunn, but he persisted in and did carry his cock away dead, as this witness verily believes; that then this witness, for the satisfaction of all the gentlemen present (altho' by the rules of cockfighting he was not obliged to do it) fetch'd a fresh cock, and put him upon the sod to the complainant's cock, and that the complainant's immediately and vigorously fought such fresh cock; that had the defendant Dunn's cock had the advantage over the complainant's cock, yet by taking his cock away before he had fairly and distinctly accounted ten times ten he had lost the battle, saith that after the ten pounds to five shillings was laid, and this deponent had accounted forty, the cock of the said defendant Dunn never fought or made battle at the complainant's cock to this deponent's observation, and which he, this deponent, saith he must have observed if he had fought or made battle at the complainant's cock, being this deponent's business so to do.

Norfolk ; London.	31 Geo. 2. C. 13 Feb. I. D. 22 Mar. 1758, at Norwich. De- livered into Court, 1 Apr. 1758. The forms of the oaths to be taken.	East.	5	Honorius Combault - Peter Colombine, Fran- cis Colombine.	Peter Colombine, Fran- cis Colombine.	Usages and customs of merchants and manufacturers generally, and in the city of Norwich particularly, touching the lengths and breadths of worsted satin and fine satin goods consigned by manu- facturers to their customers in the trade, the opening, examining, and marking of goods before consignment, goods returned upon the manufacturers' hands for various reasons. &c., short measure, inferior quality, &c., Interrogatories on the part of the plaintiff, viz.: "Is it or is it not necessary to open and examine bales of goods that are bespoken for exportation, and to examine them particularly before they are sent abroad? Is it or is it not usual, where the manufacturers are esteemed persons of credit, to trust to their skill and integrity in per- forming the commissions given to them, or is it not common to find the goods bespoken deficient in measure both as to length and width? Is it or is it not usual and customary among merchants and manufacturers of woollen, silk, or other goods of the same kind to make a distinction between the real and nominal dimensions in length and breadth, or either, and which of them, of the several pieces of goods manufactured? Is it or is it not customary among manufacturers to call satins of real breadth of eighteen inches by the nominal breadth of eighteen inches and an half, and to call satins of the real breadth of eighteen inches and an half by the nominal breadth of nineteen inches, and is it or is it not expected by dealers therein that satins which bear the name of satins of nineteen inches broad should not be of any greater breadth than eighteen inches and an half, or very near the same? Is it or is it not understood in the transactions or orders given by the merchants to the manufacturers that if any order be given to make up pieces full nineteen inches broad and full thirty yards long such pieces shall be short of the measure both in breadth and length, or is it or is it not understood that they shall really and truly answer the full dimensions ordered? Is it or is it not in the power of the manufacturers to make the pieces of the real lengths of thirty yards and the real breadth of nineteen inches, or are they by the nature of the manufacture obliged to make the pieces different from the orders and dimensions above men- tioned? Is it or is it not usually understood in this kind of trade that the manufacturer is obliged punctually to execute the orders of the merchant, and is it or is it not customary where the goods do not answer the direc- tions to return them upon the manufacturer's hands? Who is understood to be obliged to bear the loss in these cases if the goods are returned upon the merchant's hands by his correspondents abroad on account of the directions not being exactly performed or the orders not punctually complied with," &c., &c. A GLOSSARY OF THE MORE OBSOLETE FRENCH WORDS TO BE FOUND IN THE NORMAN ROLLS.

ABASTARDI.—Corrupted; counterfeited; monnoye abastardie, see Norman Rolls, entries relating to mint operations at Rouen, S. Lo, &c.

ABBATEURES.—Boughs or sprigs broken by deer rushing through thickets.

ABBATIS.—An overthrow or overthrowing; l'abbatis d'une forêt, wind-falls.

ABBÉ.—The old French word for abbot: an abbot with the monks of the same house were called the convent and made a corporation.

ABBROCHMENT.—The forestalling of a market or fair.

ABLAYS.—Corn growing, or in sheaves.

ABOLITION.—In law the leave given by the King or Judges to a criminal accuser to desist from further prosecution: abolition de créances, a general release: lettres d'abolition, an absolute pardon granted by the Prince to a province, town, or village which had offended. For grants of lettres d'abolition by Henry V. to comtès and vicomtès, see Norman Rolls.

ABONNAGE.—A limiting or compounding; also an exchange or alienation of rents, duties, or services.

ABORNER.—To limit or compound; to set a certain rent on.

ABOUQUEMENT.—A heaping up as of new made salt. See Norman Rolls, entries relating to establishment of greniers à sel.

ACAZER.—To rent, or let out upon a yearly rent.

ACCENSISSEMENT.—A holding by lease or in farm, or the paying of a yearly rent.

ACCLAMPER.—To fasten; to pin or peg.

ACCOINCT.—Acquainted or familiar with.

ACCOLADE.—A ceremony anciently used in knighthood by the King putting his hand upon the knight's neck. Greg. de Tours writes that the Kings of France in conferring the gilt shoulder belt, kissed the knight on the left cheek. The accolé or blow was in Normandy first given with the naked fist, but afterwards with the flat of the sword.

ACCORTESSE.—Discretion; circumspection.

ACCOTER.—To support; to shore up.

ACCOUPLÉ.—Charged with; accused of a crime. See Norman Rolls, entries relating to general pardons.

ACCROCHER.—Accrocher un procès, to stay proceedings in a suit.

ACHAT.—A purchase or bargain.

ACHOISON.—An occasion; also election or choice.

ACHON.—A kind of long axe.

ACQUESTS.—Purchases made or things bought by the unmarried. Nouveaux acquests, purchases of inheritances made by corporations after they had procured letters of mortmain; droict de nouvel acquest, a privilege of fining at certain times the ignoble tenant who possessed or purchased a noble tenement or inheritance.

ACQUIESCENCEMENT.—An agreement; lettre d'acquiescement, a letter of attorney by which a client empowered his attorney to compound the suit.

ACTAINDRE.—Actaindre le meffait, to fix the charge of a crime upon one; to prove a crime.

ACTOURNÉE.—A warrant, or letter of attorney.

ADCENSE.—A lease or estate in farm.

ADENERER.—To rate; to make money of.

ADIERITER.—To put into possession.

ADMODIER.—To let out land for a portion of its crop.

ADVENANT.—That portion of inheritance to which a daughter might succeed on her father dying intestate.

AFFORAGE.—The broaching of wine, &c.; droit d'afforage, the payment of two pots of wine, &c., one to the landlord and the other to the magistrate, upon the broaching of every vessel retailed.

AGRENIR.—To fill with corn.

AIDES.—Originally mere benevolences granted by a tenant to his lord in times of distress, but which finally were treated by the lords as a matter of right, and not of discretion. Aides chevets were three aides or duties yielded in Normandy by every tenant in fee unto a landlord who was noble; the first, the aide de chevalerie, was paid when the eldest son was knighted, the second, the aide de mariage, when the eldest daughter was married, and the third, the aide de rançon, helped to pay the ransom when the lord was taken prisoner in a war in which he served the King by reason of his own tenure.

AIEL OR AILE.—A writ which lay when a man's grandfather or great grandfather (called besaile), died seised of lands in fee simple, and on the day of his death the heir was dispossessed of his inheritance by a stranger.

ALBERGER.—To alien in fee farm.

ALEIER.—To purge of a crime by oath.

ALEU.—Free tenure which was held of no man and for which no service or fine was due: franc aleu noble, high jurisdiction, and seigniori held without homage, fealty, fine, or service.

ALLODIAL.—Terres allodiales, free lands for which no rents, fines, or services were due.

ALTARAGE.—The profit arising to the priest by reason of the altar.

AMASE.—A messuage or tenement.

AMENDE.—A penalty; a fine. Amendes arbitraires, fines imposed at the pleasure of the court; amendes coutumieres, fines limited by the peculiar laws and customs of every country and court; amende curiale, an amercement of an inferior court; amende de gage, a fine due from every vassal who did not deliver unto his lord a sufficient survey of the pieces he held.

AMENÉE.—The circuit of a bailiff or serjeant in which he might arrest, summon, or adjourn.

AMORTISSEMENT.—Mortmain; lettres d'amortissement, a licence of alienation or purchase in mortmain granted unto corporations.

ANNATS, ANNATES.—First fruits of a spiritual living.

ANNION.—Privilege d'annion, a year's protection granted by the sovereign or magistrate to a debtor.

ANNUALE.—The yearly rent or income of a prebendary.

AOUST.—Valet d'aoust, a reaper for the time of harvest only.

APPRENTICE EN LA LEY.—A student of law.

APPROCHER.—To summon, to appear by process.

AQUAGE.—A watercourse, or the toll paid for water-carriage.

ARBALESTIER.—A cross-bow man; also one who made cross-bows

ARDIT.—A coin worth iijd.

ARERE.—A plough.

ARMES.—Homme d'armes, one who served in complete armour on a great horse.

ARRAYER, ARROYER.—To array; previous to the reign of Henry VIII., in order to protect the kingdom from domestic insurrections or the prospect of foreign invasions, it was usual from time to time for our princes to issue commissions of array, and send into every county officers in whom they could confide, to muster, array, or set in military order the inhabitants of every district. As will be seen from the Norman Rolls, Henry V., on his conquest of Normandy, issued numerous commissions of array for the better protection of the duchy.

ARRIEREBAN.—A proclamation by which those that held of the King by a mesne tenure were summoned to assemble and serve him in his wars; different from Ban, whereby only such were called as held immediately of the King.

ARSER IN LE MAIN.—Burning in the hand. The punishment of criminals who had the benefit of clergy.

ARTILLIER.—A bowyer; one who made both bows and arrows.

ASSART or ESSART.—An offence committed in the forest by pulling up the trees by the roots, which served as covert for deer, and making the ground plain as arable land.

AUBAINE.—Escheating; also an escheat; droit d'aubaine, the right of the King entitling him, at the death of an alien, to all he was worth, unless he had a peculiar exemption.

AULNE.—An ell: the measure varied; the aulne de Bordeaux was four feet and a half, the aulne de Dijon two feet and a half, the aulne de Paris three feet, and the aulne de Provins the same as the aulne de Dijon. In the Norman Rolls the aulne de Paris appears to have been the accepted standard.

AULNAGE.—A measure; particularly the measuring with an ell.

AULNAGER, AULNEUR.—An ancient officer, appointed by the King, whose business it was to measure all woollen cloth made for sale, that the Crown might not be defrauded of its customs and duties. Appointments to this office are of frequent occurrence in the Norman Rolls.

AVENAGE.—A certain quantity of oats paid by a tenant to his landlord as a rent or in lieu of some other duties.

AVERS.—Draught-cattle; cart horses.

BAC.—A ferry-boat: droit de bac, ferriage.

BACHELIER.—A title of gentry inferior to banneret, but superior to esquire; also the lord of a castle or place which was derived from, but equal in jurisdiction with, a vicomté.

BAHUTIER.—Of, or belonging to, a trunk; cheval bahutier, a sumpter-horse.

BAIL.—Lease: bail à ferme, a lease for years.

BAILLI.—A magistrate appointed within a certain district as the deputy of the King or some great seigneur, to execute justice and maintain peace. Normandy was parcelled out into bailiwicks by Henry II., and to the baillis great power was entrusted. Next the comte ranked the bailli, and from the Norman Rolls we see the nature of the duties he had to perform. He determined appeals from the inferior judges at assizes, he collected the revenue, he called out the ban and arriereban, he superintended the purity of the currency, he had authority to issue proclamations in his own name, and to him all royal mandates were generally addressed; baillis de provinces, bailiffs of bailiwicks, in the possession of dukes, marquises, or comtes, in contradistinction to the inferior bailiwicks which belonged to vicomtes, barons, and chastellains; baillis de France were in the olden time the bailiffs of the four towns, Vermendois, Sens, Mâcon, and S. Pierre de Moustier, which the French kings had united to their domains: baillis royaux were the bailiffs royal, who, in addition to other privileges, challenged the entire decision of royal and privileged cases.

BAILLIE.—A bailiwick; lettres de baillie, writs authorising him to whom they were addressed to proceed to execution upon the goods of another. From the Norman Rolls, we see that they were often employed against absentees and such as refused to swear fealty to Hen. V.

BALANE.—An acorn; acorn-like.

BALENGER.—A barge or balingier.

BAN.—A proclamation; any public summons or notification. Ban et arriereban, a proclamation whereby all (except certain privileged persons) who held lands of the Crown were summoned to meet at a certain place, there to attend the king whithersoever and against whomsoever he went. See Arriereban. Ban de vendanger, a proclamation for the beginning of vintage.

BANCAGE—BANQUAGE.—The circuit of a country within which the inhabitants were bound to repair unto one certain mill, oven, &c., paying a fee for their several uses unto the lord thereof; also the privilege of having such a mill, &c.

BANNERET.—A title inferior to that of baron, but superior to that of an ordinary knight, granted by the Kings of France to such as had ten vassals and the means to maintain a troop of horse; or to any gentleman who had behaved valiantly in two royal battles. A knight-banneret was privileged to have a banner of his own.

BANNERIE.—Low jurisdiction : droit de bannerie, the royalty of a common mill, &c., to which tenants were to resort.

BANNIE.—Confiscation; outlawry; la bannie d'une ville, the territory belonging to a town.

BANON.—The season during which, in Normandy, cattle were turned out of a town to feed on the commons.

BARONNIE.—A barony, a lordship of dignity inferior to a vicomté, but superior to a chastellenie.

BAS-CHEVALIERS.—Inferior knights holding military fees by a base tenure as distinguished from chief or superior knights.

BASINET, BASSINET, BACINET.—A helmet.

BASTILDE, BASTILLE.—A fortress furnished with tower, dungeon, and ditches.

BECHE, BECQUE.—A ditch made upon the highway.

BEDEAU.—A beadle; in Normandy he was an under-bailiff.

BENERICE.—Benefice à simple tonsure, a living without the charge of souls.

BERBIAGE.—The rent paid for the depasturing of sheep.

BERNAGE.—The baggage of an army.

BERCELETTE.—A shepherd's cur; from the French bercil, a sheepfold.

BESACE.—A bag; a pouch.

BESCHE.—A spade: hence bescher, to dig.

BEVERCHES.—Customary services done at the bidding of the lord by his inferior tenants.

BICHET.—A measure of about two bushels for holding corn.

BILLON.—The metal of which base coin was made; billonneur, a false coiner; see Proclamations in the Norman Rolls as to the debasing of the coin.

BINEUR.—A labourer in the vineyards; also spelt vineur.

BLAIRIE.—Corn lands; droit de blairie, the liberty to turn cattle into corn lands; also the power of the lord to fine those who turned their cattle into the pastures of his manor without licence.

BLANCHETTE.—The fine white flour of wheat.

BLAVIER.—Belonging to corn. Sergent blavier, the officer who watched the corn until it was reaped.

BLETE.—Turf, peat.

BOCAGE.—A grove, thicket, or small wood.

BORDAGE.—A servile tenure; droit de bordage, the base services reserved by certain lords upon the letting of their small tenements.

Bos, BOSC.—The same as bois; boscage, food which wood and trees yield to cattle, as mast, &c.; of frequent occurrence in the Norman Rolls.

BOUCHET.—A drink of the nature of hypocras. In the Norman Rolls this word frequently appears as bochet, bochette, and boschet.

BOUGETTE.—A little coffer hanging from the saddle-bow, in which women in former times placed their trinkets when riding into the country; also a trunk or pouch.

BOUJON.—An arrow with a broad head.

BOVATE, BOUVATE.—A bovate of land was as much land as one ox could plough: an oxgang; it was calculated at fifteen acres.

- BRACHET.—A bitch hound; hence the old English word brach (see King Lear, act 1, scene 4), for a bitch which follows a hare by the scent; a harrier.
- BRASSARTS.—Armour for the arms; vambraces or bracers. Same as garde-bras.
- BROC.—A Norman measure of twelve pints.
- BROCART.—A two year old deer.
- BROCHE.—An awl or large packing needle; also a spit; hence to broach or pierce a barrel.
- BRUERE.—Heath-ground.
- BUCCINE.—A trumpet.
- BUIE.—A water-pot, a pitcher.
- CALIGES.—Greaves, also hose.
- CAQUEREL.—A sprat or pickled herring.
- CARUCATE.—A plough-land of 100 acres, or according to Skene, as much land as may be tilled in a year and a day by one plough.
- CENS.—Rent of assise, quit rent, chief rent: it was the first pecuniary charge that was imposed upon conquered or un-rented land, as a sign or acknowledgment of the seigneurie of him that granted it; cens capital, chief rent; censuel, held by the title of cens.
- CERAGE.—A payment to find candles in the church.
- CERQUEMANER.—To lay out the bounds of land: employed in the Norman Rolls to limit the extent of the jurisdiction of comtes, vicomtes, and bailiffs.
- CHAFRON.—A metal mask which covered the head of the war horse in action; also spelt chafront and shafront.
- CHAMBELLAGE.—A fine paid to a landlord upon every change of tenant; also the fee due to the usher of the Exchequer Chamber upon every homage made by one of the King's tenants.
- CHAMPART.—Field-rent; the half or part of a crop which was due, by bargain or custom, unto the landlord.
- CHASSE.—A chace; a station of game more extensive than a park, but less than a forest: according to Manwood the beasts of chace were the buck, doe, fox, martron, and roe.
- CHASTELAIN.—The lord or owner of a castle or a fortified house; also of a territory to which castle-like jurisdiction and royalties belonged.
- CHASTELLENTIE, CHASTELAINERIE.—The tenure or honour of a castle-wick; the jurisdiction of a chastelain.
- CHEVAGE.—A tax paid by such as held land in villenage to their lords in acknowledgment; it was a kind of head or poll-money.
- CHEVEL.—Chief, principal; fief chevel, a noble inheritance held in capite and capable of jurisdiction.
- CHIMINAGE.—A toll due by custom for having a way through a forest.
- CHOISNE.—A loaf of white bread.
- CLAME, CLAIN.—The fine paid unto justice for the seizure of beasts found doing damage.
- CLERC.—A scholar or learned person, hence a churchman: used more frequently in the Norman Rolls to designate a secular priest. Clerc de la chambre, the King's private secretary. Clerc des fiefs, the attorney of a King or great seigneur, who kept the register of the homages of the vassals, and of the duties that had to be paid to the lord.
- CLERGEZ.—The name in olden times for officers of justice who were supposed to be learned men; the word occurs but once in the Norman Rolls (see 6 Hen. V., Pt. 2., membrane 36 dors).
- COHUE.—A hall to plead in; a sessions-house.
- COMMISSAIRE.—A justice of the peace; a commissioner or overseer. Commissaire de l'artillerie, one appointed to examine the ordnance in a certain district.

Commissaire du chastelet, a scavenger. Commissaires des vivres et munitions, officers who provided victuals for armies and garrisons.

COMPTE.—La chambre des comptes, the Exchequer.

COMTE.—A count, an earl; in the Norman Rolls the word is used to designate the governor and judge of a province, who administered justice on behalf of the sovereign, and who levied the penal fines and amercements. In Normandy the title of sovereignty was anciently comte, nor does it appear that previous to the eleventh century any but such as were of the blood royal bore the personal dignity of comes. At first, except in the family of the monarch, the honour was not hereditary, but ultimately the principle of hereditary succession, with partition among the male children of the deceased, was acquiesced in and became the settled custom of Normandy. That the title was a very lofty one and seldom conferred, is evident from the nature of the entries in the Norman Rolls creating Gaston de Foix comte of Longueville.

COMTÉ.—The extent of territory placed under the jurisdiction of a comte. Until the middle of the sixteenth century this extent of territory consisted of four baronies, each barony having at the least the estates of ten gentlemen belonging to it. The translation of the word by shire is incorrect. Shire has reference solely to locality, whereas a comté, as we learn from the Norman Rolls, might include several provinces, wide apart from each other, or be confined only to such environs of a town, as had within their area the necessary baronies and estates to constitute a comté. See Vicomte and Vicomté.

CONGÉ D'ÉLIRE.—The license of the sovereign sent to proceed to the election of a bishop, or abbot, or prior when a vacancy occurred.

CONNIL, CONNIN.—A coney; a rabbit.

CONSEILLIER.—Used in the Norman Rolls to describe an advocate.

CONSERVATEUR.—Conservateur royal, an officer who maintained the privileges granted by the sovereign to the universities.

COUILLAGE.—A tax paid in times past by priests for licenses to keep women.

COUILLARDS.—Round pieces of iron which in olden times used to be shot out of ships: the word appears but once in the Norman Rolls, and is then spelt cuillards.

COULISSE.—A portcullis.

COURVÉE, CORVÉE.—A day's work due by a tenant unto his lord.

COUSTILLIER.—The squire of a knight.

COUSTUME.—A customary service or tenure: droit de coutume was, in Normandy, the toll paid for commodities uttered in the market place.

COUSTOMIERS.—Experienced lawyers who were able to inform the Court what the law and local customs were in every case.

CRENELÉ, CARNELÉ, CRESTELÉ.—Imbattled; having battlements.

CRESTEAUX.—The battlements of a wall.

CRINIÈRE.—Small armour plates for the protection of the neck of the war-horse in action. Sometimes called manefaire.

CRY DE PAIS.—Hue and cry.

CULETTES.—Armour for the protection of the loins; it was hooked on to the cuirass.

CURIE.—A ward in a city.

CURTILAGE.—A courtyard, backside, or piece of ground lying near and belonging to a dwelling-house.

DACIER.—A toll gatherer.

DAMOISEL.—A youth of gentle blood professing arms but not yet knighted. Occasionally spelt in the Norman Rolls damozel, and damoiseau.

DANGER.—Les dangers des bois, amerciements and confiscations adjudged unto the King by the officers of woods and forests: droit de tiers et danger, a third and tenth paid unto the King out of the price of every sale of wood that took place in his woods and forests; though this tax was occasionally levied throughout France it more especially applied to Normandy. The Norman Rolls contain numerous entries relating to these fines.

RECORDS.—The two attendants on a serjeant who acted as witnesses when he made an arrest or served a writ.

REGARD, REGARD.—A term used in the Norman Rolls for the oversight or inspection of the King's forests ; also for the office and province of the regarder : the word is as often spelt garde as regard.

REGARDER, REGARDER.—According to Manwood, "a regarder is an officer of the King's forests that is sworn to make the regard of the forest as the same hath been used to be made in former time ; and also to view and inquire of all offences of the forest, as well of vert as of venison, and of all concealments of any offences or defaults of the foresters and of all other officers of the King's forest, concerning the execution of their offices." It was specially the duty of the regarder to go through the whole forest before the holding of the sessions of the forest, which took place every third year, to see and inquire after trespassers and for the survey of dogs. See entries in the Norman Rolls relating to the forests of Lions, Bort, Beaulieu, Brotonne, Rabé, &c.

RELEVER.—Relever droiture, to pay the relief and rights due by a tenant upon his first entry.

RELIEF.—The payment made to the seigneur by the tenant coming into possession of an estate held under him ; relief de bouche, the acknowledgment of a vassal that he held his land of a seigneur ; relief de chambellage, a relief due by a husband for an inheritance falling to his wife during her marriage ; relief de fief, the acknowledgment of tenure yielded by a new vassal to his seigneur ; relief à merci, one year's profit in three.

SALVAGE.—Droit de salvage, a tenth part of goods which were like to have perished by shipwreck due to him who saved them.

SANCTIMONIALE.—A nun.

SANG.—Justice à sang, mean or middle jurisdiction : it was so called because the seigneur exercising it might, when whipping a vassal, fetch blood, but was not allowed to proceed further. He alone who wielded la haute justice could flog a man to death.

SAUF.—Sauf respit, the time granted by a seigneur to his vassal for the doing of homage.

SAULOYE, SAULSAYE.—A grove of willows.

SCUTE.—A French gold coin of the value of 3s. 4d. : a crown.

SEGRAYE.—A verderer.

SEISIN.—Possession ; livery of seisin, delivery of possession, called by the Feudists investiture.

SENECHAL.—The chief justice or magistrate of a district ; also a steward.

SENECHAUSSEE.—The jurisdiction of a seneschal.

SERGEANT.—Sergent à cheval, one whose duty it was to ride through the villages and districts belonging to his bailiwick to arrest offenders and keep order ; sergent chevaucheur, an officer of the forests who punished trespassers and looked after the game ; sergents dangereux, see Dangereux ; sergent de l'espée, "doit tenir les veuës, bailler les assignations, faire les semonces et les commandemens des assises et faire tenir ce qu'y est jugé, et delivrer par droit les

"namps qui sont prins, et justicier à l'espée et aux armes les malfaiteurs et "fugitifs;" sergent féodé or du fief, an hereditary serjeant who had some kind of jurisdiction for the recovery of rents and royalties due to the lord of the seigneurie in which he resided; sergent fermier, one who, though forbidden by law, farmed the office of serjeant; sergent forestier, one who kept order in the King's forests, with power to arrest the persons and seize the goods of those who committed damage; sergent messier or mesiller, the officer who looked after the corn fields and vineyards until the harvest and vintage seasons were over; sergent à pied, the ordinary serjeant of a town; sergent prairier, the officer whose duty it was to look after the meadows for the preservation of their hay and grass; sergent à verge, the ordinary serjeant of a town: so called because when arresting a culprit it was his duty to carry in his hand a rod or small mace; appointments to these various offices are of frequent occurrence in the Norman Rolls.

SERGENERIE.—The office, place, or duty of a serjeant.

SERGEANTIE, SERGEANTIE.—A service anciently due to the Crown for lands held of it, and which could not be due to any other lord. It was divided into grand and petit. Grand serjeanty was a species of tenure, whereby the tenant was bound, instead of serving the King generally in the wars, to do him some special and honorary service in person, viz., to carry his banner or his sword, or to be his butler or other officer on certain special great occasions. Thus Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, held the manor of Fingreth, in the county of Oxford, by the "service" of being Chamberlain of the King on the day of his coronation;" Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, held the manor of Chaldecote, "by the service of being Lord High Constable of England;" Hugh de Nevill held the manor of Wethersfed "by the service of setting the first dish at the King's "right hand on his coronation day, and he was to have the dish and towel;" the prior of Bilsington held his lands "by serving the lord the King with his cup on Whitsunday;" John de Clyfton held his lands "by the service of being butler at the King's coronation;" and Ela, Countess of Warwick, held the manor of Hoke Norton "by the service of carving before the lord the King "on Christmas day, and to have the knife of our lord the King with "which she carved." All these are instances of tenure by grand serjeanty. Petit serjeanty greatly resembles grand serjeanty, for as the latter was a personal service, the former was a rent or render, both tending to some purpose concerning the King's person. The service in petit serjeanty was the rendering annually to the King some small implement of war, as a sword, a buckler, a cross bow, and the like. The entries in the Norman Rolls offer a variety of the services by petit serjeanty. Thus the Earl of Mortaigne held his lands by the service of providing the King "with a cup when- "ever he and his heirs shall enter Falaise, and of bearing before him every feast "of St. George a sheathed sword during mass." Walter Hungerford held the castle and barony of Hommet "by homage and the rendering yearly to the "King a lance with the brush of a fox hanging therefrom."* The vicomte of Montreuil held his lands by "the rendering yearly a pair of plated gauntlets to "the King;" whilst others held their lands by the annual rendering of coats of mail of pure chain, swords, pole-axes, the heads of lances, pairs of gilt spurs, belts for coats of mail, banners with the arms of St. George emblazoned upon them, pounds of pepper, chaplets of marjoroms, bouquets of red roses, &c.—most of these services being very significant of the martial character of Henry V.

SIRE.—A title of honour which without addition was given only to the King; but with addition unto merchants or tradesmen (whence sire Pierre, sire Jehan); also to knights (whence sire chevalier), and to the owners of seigneuries (whence le sire de Ponts en Guienne and le sire du Pays); all seigneurs, whether of territory or jurisdiction, were styled sires.

* A fox's brush was a very favourite appendage of the King to his arms. Monstrelet says that when Henry made his entry into Rouen, he was followed by a page mounted on a black horse, bearing a lance, at the end of which, near the point, was fastened a fox's brush by way of streamer, which afforded great matter of remark. Elmham and Stowe give the explanation of this. In 1414 the King kept his Lent at Kenilworth Castle, and caused an arbour to be "planted there in the marsh for his pleasure among the thorns and bushes, where a fox before "had harboured; which fox he killed, being a thing then thought to prognosticate that he "should expel the crafty deceit of the French King."

SOCAGE.—A tenure of lands by or for certain inferior services of husbandry to be performed to the lord of the fee; from the French soc, a plough-share.

SOL, SOLZ, SOLD, SOU.—A sou, or the French shilling; it was worth 12 deniers and was equal to the twentieth part of the ancient livre: in the old coinage of France there were the sol Tournois, the sol Parisien, the sol Barrois, the sol Bourdelais, and the sol of 15 deniers.

SOLLERETS.—Armour for the feet.

SPASE, ESPASE, SPAZE.—A sword.

STIPAL.—Fief stipal, a fief which descended to a direct heir or which still continued in the possession of those who were of the main stock of a family.

SURCENS.—A cens raised upon a cens; a second rent, or cens created upon the alienation of land censuel.

TENURE.—Originally there were two modes of holding land in Normandy, viz.: —allodial, over which the owner had entire and irresponsible dominion, which he could dispose of at his own pleasure, or transmit as an inheritance to his children; and feudal, over which the owner had but a conditional dominion acknowledging a superior lord, upon whose pleasure the tenure precariously depended and without whose consent nothing could be done. This was the groundwork of the Feudal System which subsequently destroyed all allodial property and caused feudalism to become the law of the western nations. As feudalism developed, the fictitious maxim arose that all lands were originally granted by the sovereign and held mediately or immediately of him as lord paramount in consideration of certain services to be rendered by the holder. Those who held immediately from the sovereign were called tenants in capite, which was the most honourable tenure; this was of two kinds, either ut de honore, where the land was held of the sovereign as proprietor of some honor, castle, or manor, or ut de coronâ, where it was held of him in right of the crown itself. When these tenants granted portions of their lands to inferior persons they were called mesne lords or barons with regard to such inferior holders, who were styled tenants paravail, the lowest tenant, because they were supposed to make avail or profit of the land. The lands were called feuds, either proper, which were purely military, given militiæ gratiâ, without price, to persons duly qualified for military service; or improper, which did not in point of acquisition, services and the like, strictly conform to the nature of a mere military feud, such as those that were sold or bartered for any equivalent, or granted free from all circumstances, or in consideration of any certain services. See entries on the Norman Rolls relating to grants of land by Henry V. Tenure en chevalerie, or knight service, was the original and most honourable species of tenure, created by a determinate quantity of land called a knight's fee. This tenure was granted by words of pure donation, dedi et concessi; transferred by investiture, i.e. by a solemn public delivery of the very land itself by the sovereign to a vassal, in the presence of his other vassals and perfected by homage and fealty—homage being the acknowledgment of tenure, fealty, the solemn oath made by the vassal of fidelity and attachment to the lord. The holder of a knight's fee was bound to attend the lord to the wars on horseback, armed as a knight, for forty days in every year, if called upon, and this attendance was his rent or service for the land he held. Tenure brisée, a disseisin.

TENURE EN FRANC-ALMOIGNE.—See Franc.

TERCEAU.—A certain quantity of wine taken by the seigneur upon the broaching of every cask of his vassal.

TERRAGE.—Field rent; the twelfth sheaf or bundle of all sorts of corn, flax, hemp, &c., grown by the vassal due to his seigneur.

TERRIER.—The list of the lands of a seigneur with the names of the tenants and the rents they pay.

TIERCER.—To plough the ground a third time.

TOLSESTER.—A fine for license to brew.

TOILLART.—An executioner, a hangman.

TONLIEU.—The toll due to the seigneur of a fair or market for the sale or standing of cattle and other commodities in it.

TRAICT.—An arrow; gens de traict, bowmen; in the Norman Rolls spelt gens de tractu.

TREU, TRU, TRUAGE.—The toll paid unto a seigneur for goods carried through, or by, his lands; also any toll or imposition.

TRIPOT.—A place where corn was sold.

TROUSSE.—A quiver for arrows.

VALET.—Du Cange and other antiquaries are of opinion that the appellation of valet was generally given to youths of good family who were not yet knighted; valet de notre cuisine, yeoman of the kitchen; valet de notre larderie, yeoman of the larder, &c. The word is of constant occurrence in the Norman Rolls in connexion with minor offices held under the Crown.

VASTINES.—Waste grounds.

VAULTRE.—A mongrel hound used in the chase of the wild boar.

VAVASOUR.—One who himself holding of a superior lord, had others holding under him; in degree he was inferior to a baron. The word also signifies a vassal of a vassal, a mesne tenant, one who held a fee of a vassal.

VEJOURS [VISORES, LAT.].—Persons sent by a court to take a view of any place in question for the better decision of the right thereto; also persons appointed to view the result of an offence. In the Norman Rolls the word is spelt vécurs.

VENAISON.—Venison; according to Manwood a general term for every beast of forest and chase.

VENTES.—A fine for alienation which was sometimes paid to the seigneur feudal, but more commonly to the seigneur censuel of whom the land was held.

VERDIER.—A verderer; the judicial officer of the royal forest whose duty it was, according to Manwood, to look to the vert and see it well maintained; he was sworn to keep the assizes or laws of the forest, and also to view, receive, and enrol the attachments and presentments of all manner of trespasses of the forest of vert and of venison. Appointments to the post are of constant occurrence in the Norman Rolls.

VERT, VERTE, VERD.—Otherwise called greenhue; everything that bore a green leaf within a forest that might give covert to deer; but especially great and thick coverts. Manwood divides Vert into overt-vert and nether-vert; the overt-vert was that which was termed haut-boys, and nether-vert, sub-boys; and into special vert, which was all trees growing within the forest that bore fruit, to feed deer, because the destroying of it was more grievously punished than of any other Vert. Also, that power which a man had, by royal grant, to cut greenwood in a forest.

VICOMTE.—The deputy or lieutenant of a comte; the guardian of a comté until it had been furnished by the King with a comte. He was only permitted to exercise la moyenne justice, la haute being reserved exclusively by the comte for himself. The word vicomte is often incorrectly translated into English by sheriff; the term sheriff however simply denotes a person holding office in the shire, whence its application to the representative of the King in the district, whilst vicomte implies that the officer was the person acting in the room of a comes or comte, a distinction only applicable in the province of Normandy, or wherever the title of sovereignty was anciently comes or comte.

VICOMTÉ.—The jurisdiction of a vicomte. Upon this subject Stapleton, the editor of the "Magni Rotuli Scaccarii Normanniæ," makes the following remarks:—"A vice-comitatus [or vicomté] as the name implies, "originated in the lieutenancy, either of an entire comitatus, or of a certain territory within which aid was levied for castle guard annexed to the castellum of the comes, and therefore denominated also a castellania or castellaria, being conferred upon personages, his fideles, for purposes of military defence and governance. These vice-comites or castellani had thenceforth the privilege of sharing with their suzerain in the issues from the imposts pro hoste, i.e., for the host or army, being such burdens as had been made customary upon the tenure of lands to provide for their safeguard. Part of the castle of the suzerain, with a demesne in the bourg and adjoining villis, of which fiefs were held as a caput elsewhere within the comté was attached to the possession of this office; and after the laws of hereditary succession had been embodied in the feudal code, the vicomté was not unfrequently converted into an hereditary fief."

VILL or VILLAGE.—A manor; a parish; the outpart of a parish. “Vill is a neighbourhood of many mansions, a collection of many neighbours, and, under the term of vills, boroughs and cities are contained.” The following is the difference between a mansion, a village, and a manor :—“A mansion may be of one or more houses, but it must be of one dwelling-house, and none near to it; for if other houses are contiguous it is a village; and a manor may consist of several villages or one alone.”

VILLEIN.—One who held by a base service; villein en gros, one annexed to the person of the seigneur and transferable by deed from one owner to another; villein regardant, one annexed to the manor or land.

VIVARIE, VIVARY.—A place where animals were preserved; a park, warren, piscary, &c.

VIRE.—The arrow called a quarrel.

VOIRIE, VOUERIE, VOYERIE.—Jurisdiction; grande voirie, mean jurisdiction or la moyenne justice.

WAMBais.—Doublets composed of many folds of linen stuffed with cotton, wool, or hair and commonly covered with leather; they were worn under steel armour to make it sit easy on the body. Wambais is often confounded with vambrace, which is armour for the arm.

YEME.—Winter.

No. 3.—CALENDAR OF PATENT ROLLS; 1 EDWARD I.

INTRODUCTION.

THE following specimen of a Calendar of the Patent Rolls of Edward I. is presented in continuation of the Calendar of the Patent Rolls of Henry III., commenced by the late Mr. H. J. Sharpe, one of the Assistant Keepers of the Public Records, and completed by myself. An exact reproduction in type of the Patent Rolls of King John was published in 1835, under the editorship of the late Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, then Chief Clerk in the Record Office at the Tower of London, with full and sufficient indexes, and a most valuable and learned introduction. The Calendar of the Patent Rolls of Henry III. is composed of précis, following the order of the entries, of every entry on the rolls. It is in Latin, like the "Calendarium Genealogicum" of Mr. Charles Roberts, but, unlike that work, it has no index. It contains about 128,000 names, and is still in manuscript.

The Calendar which follows differs from all these works in more than one important particular. It is not a transcript of the roll, but consists of précis of entries on it; these are in English, and not in Latin, and, instead of following the order of the entries, are arranged, lexicographically, under leading names which occur in them. In the MS. from which the Calendar has been printed, all the names in the roll were introduced. But the character of by far the larger number of the entries rendered it advisable, in this specimen, to depart to some extent from the plan of the manuscript. At least seven-tenths of the roll are filled by appointments of justices to try assises of novel disseisin, assises of mort d'ancestor, assises of darrein presentment, assises of nuisance, juries, and certificates or certifications arising out of these, all of them arraigned between parties named in the appointments, the subject of litigation being also specified. Each of these entries thus contains, of necessity, at the very least four names:—The name of the justice appointed to try the case, the names of the two parties to the action, and the name of a place. Now the chief value of these instruments is due to the fact that they form a tolerably perfect index to the Assise Rolls. The introduction into the Calendar of all the names occurring in them would have added, on the most moderate computation, about six thousand cross-references to it, without apparently securing any such advantages to those consulting it as would have sufficiently outweighed the inconvenience of greatly increased bulk, and the augmented risk of error arising from the great multiplication of entries.

No cross-references, therefore, have been given to the précis of these entries except in the cases in which more than one place is mentioned in them. Then, the précis of the entry, taking its position in the Calendar, under the name of the place which stands first in the entry, cross-references to that name have been given under the names of the places which follow it in the précis.

These appointments, numerous as they are in the Patent Roll of the first year of Edward I., and numerous as they continued to be down to, and beyond, the end of his reign, were, in earlier times, of rare occurrence on the Patent Rolls. They are only ten in number on the Patent Roll 4 Henry III. But the form of the appointments was at that date much fuller than that which was adopted later in the reign; and some time before 1 Edward I. the entries of them had become so very numerous that a shorter form of enrolment was, almost of necessity, adopted. At the latter date, one of these appointments rarely occupies more than a single line. In fact, had they been enrolled as fully as at first, no reasonable amount of parchment would have sufficed to contain the entries of a single year. There are, on a rough computation, between two and three thousand of them in the following Calendar. The fines paid "pro assisa novæ disseisinæ (mortis antecessoris, &c.) habenda" entered on the Fine Rolls, show that these actions were a very important source of revenue.

The justices who tried them appear, from an examination of the Feet of Fines, to have been Justices in the King's Bench and Common Pleas. They were:—Bekingham, Fulton, Heliun, Hengham, Montfort, Oketon, Preston, Saham, Seyton, Stanes, Weyland, and Woolavington. They have been described by Mr. Foss (Tabulæ Curiales) as Justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, and it is generally supposed that, at some time before the beginning of the reign of Edward I., the two Courts had become distinct. There are two main theories on this subject; one is, that the Court of Common Pleas was separated from the Curia Regis in pursuance of the eighth article of the Magna Carta of King John: the other, that the article itself formulated a separation already existing of the former Court from the latter. Much stress is laid by those who hold the latter theory (the materials for a definite conclusion are really so few and so scattered that almost any theory is defensible) on the mention, before the date of Magna Carta, of Justices "de banco." Mr. Foss, in his "Lives of the Judges," argues, with great acuteness and much learning, against Coke and Dugdale, that the "Justitiani de Banco" were not, of necessity, Justices who tried only pleas between party and party, that the separation between the Courts proceeded very gradually, and that it was not until the reign of Henry III. that the words "Justitiani de banco" began to be applied to the Justices who tried causes between private parties at Westminster. Mr. Foss bases his conclusion on entries in the Fine Rolls. In an inquisition, however, of the 30th year of Henry III. (No. 31.) to which my attention has been called by Mr. W. D. Selby, one of the senior clerks in the Public Record Office, one Richard de Belfrage is said to have impleaded a certain Emma de Pirie "per breve domini Regis Henrici avi domini Regis Henrici nunc presentis et coram Justitiariis domini Regis de Banco." Unless, and this is by no means out of the bounds of probability, the legal phraseology of Henry III. has, in this instance, been applied to the Judges of Henry II., it is quite clear that, before the date of the Magna Carta of King John, there existed Justices called "Justitiani de banco," by whom pleas between party and party were tried, and that these Justices were not identical with the Justices Itinerant (or they would have been described as such). But there is nothing to show that the "Justices of the Bench" then sat "in quodam certo loco" and dealt only with "communia placita." And this is Mr. Foss's contention.

In the writs of association (m. 10d.) directed to these justices mention is made of their appointment, by letters patent of Edward I., to try "assisas, juratas, et recognitiones" in definite circuits. No trace of such appointments is, however, to be found on the Patent Roll 1 Edward I. Though on a cedula attached to m. 7 of the Close Roll of that year, there is a list of circuits with the corresponding justices "ad assisas, &c." which agrees (except in the substitution of Rutland for Lincoln, and the addition of the counties beyond Trent, which are assigned to Oketon and Bekingham) with the lists on m. 10d. of the Patent Roll.

It is difficult to understand the necessity for the co-existence of the two sets of appointments, the general and the special. Without warrant, general or special, no trial could be commenced by any justices. But, given the general appointments for defined circuits, for what reason were the special appointments to try particular assises requisite? The question may be supplemented by another (to which no definite final answer has been given by legal authorities), how are these justices "ad assisas, &c.," to be described? As Justices of Assise (before Stat. 21 Edward I.), as Justices Itinerant (after the decision of the "magnates" in January, 1 Edward I.), or, after Dugdale (Orig. Jur. 2nd ed., p. 53), as both the one and the other? Justices Itinerant because they went circuits, and Justices of Assise because they tried "assises"?

A few words on the nature of these actions may be permitted. They belong to that class of real actions by which, not the right of property but, the right of possession, was determined.

The most common of them, the Assise of Novel Disseisin, was an action instituted by a person (the demandant) who alleged that he had been wrongfully, and without judgment of any court ("injuste et sine iudicio") put out of seisin (disseised) of his freehold by another person (the deforciant) at a period described as recent (whence the term "novel"), the recency of the disseisin being defined by limitations which were altered by statute from time to time. In 1 Edward I. the "disseisin" was "novel" if it had been effected after the first passage of Henry III. into Brittany, forty-two years before. This limitation was altered, verbally at least, by the Statute of Westminster the First (cap. 39). And (Blackstone, iii. 10) the limitation settled by that Act remained unaltered until A.D. 1540; so that, in legal language, an event was considered in that year to be recent which was three hundred and ten years old.

At the date of Bracton's treatise "De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliæ" the word "disseisin" was employed in a very wide sense. It applied not only to violent and "unjust" ejectment from a freehold of the possessor, his agent ("procurator"), or "family"; but to the cases in which, in the absence of the possessor, no one else having been left in possession, another person took possession and denied him admittance on his return; or in which the possessor was impeded entirely or partially in the use of his freehold; or where one made use of it by ploughing, digging, reaping, and carrying, against the will of the possessor, and under the contention that the freehold was not his, but that of the person so acting; or by turning in cattle, or otherwise imposing a servitude on land hitherto free; or by making an improper use of an easement to which one had a right in the land of another; or by distraining for services not due, or in excess of the reasonable distress; or by claiming to use with the right possessor "velit, nolit;" or by impeding him from peaceful and quiet use by raising an unjust contention with him (Chronicles and Memorials, Bracton, iii., pp. 15–19).

Many of the entries in the Patent Roll 1 Edward I. were probably of fictitious actions, leading to a covenant, or of disseisins by election as they were called; when for the purpose of obtaining a speedy remedy, the demandant chose to consider himself "disseised" that he might be able to avail himself of this assise.

The Assise of Mort Dancestor was an action by which a person, who alleged that he was the heir of an "ancestor," being his father, mother, uncle, aunt, brother, or sister in respect of a freehold of which that "ancestor," as he alleged, died seised after a period variously limited, claimed possession of his inheritance against one by whose alleged entry into it he had been prevented from taking possession. If the demandant claimed possession as heir of an "ancestor" more remotely related to him than in the degrees mentioned, his remedy was by writ of Ael, Besael, or Cosinage, or, for more remote relationships, by a writ of entry or of right.

The Assise of Darrein Presentment dealt with the seisin of a presentation possessed as he alleged by the demandant or his ancestors and in which he had been impeded or deforced by one who contested the presentation.

Certifications (or certificates) were re-examinations of the recognitors (or jurors) of an assise generally by the justices who had tried it, in cases where they were in doubt as to the verdict, or where the jurors had not been sufficiently examined on certain "articles."

The trials of many of these actions are entered on the Assise Rolls (Divers Counties). An example may be interesting:—On m. 19d. of the Patent Roll 1 Edward I., we find the appointment of Robert Fulconis to take the assise of novel disseisin arraigned by John son of William, of Swaffham Prior's, and Matilda his wife against Juliana late wife of William son of Robert de Barway, touching a freehold in Barway.

On m. 25 of the Assise Roll 1 Edward I., No. 1, the trial is entered as follows:—

Coram Roberto Fulcon' apud Novum Mercatum die Martis proximâ ante festum Sancti Gregorii papæ anno regni regis E. primo.

Cant' :—Assisa venit recognitura si Juliana quæ fuit uxor Willelmi filii Roberti de Bereway et Nicholaus filius ejusdem Julianæ injuste, &c. [et sine judicio] disseisiverunt Johannem filium Willelmi de Swaffham Prioris et Matildam uxorem ejus de libero tenemento suo in Bereweys post primam, &c. [transfretationem domini Regis Henrici patris Regis nunc in Britanniam]. Et unde queruntur quod disseisiverunt eos de uno mesuagio tribus acris terræ una acra prati et dimidia acra alneti cum pertinentiis in eadem villa.

Et Juliana quæ fuit uxor Willelmi filii Roberti de Bereway per ballivum suum venit et dicit pro se et pro prædicto Nicholaio filio suo quod nullam fecit prædictæ Matildæ injuriam et bene cognoscit quod aliquo tempore dedit prædictum tenementum prædictæ Matildæ et postea quando Johannes filius Willelmi de Swaffham Prioris voluit matrimonium contrahere cum prædicta Matilda prolocutum fuit inter ipsam Julianam et prædictos Johannem et Matildam quod prædicta Matilda [sic ? Juliana] daret prædictis Johanni et Matildæ viginti marcas et rehaberet tenementum prædictum et illas eis dedit et sic per voluntatem prædictorum Johannis et Matildæ intravit prædictum tenementum et non per disseisinam et petit quod inquiratur.

Et prædicti Johannes et Matilda dicunt quod ipsa Matilda fuit in bona et pacifica seisina de prædicto tenemento quousque prædicta Matilda et Nicholaus filius ejus ipsam injuste et sine judicio disseisiverunt. Et quod ita sit petunt quod inquiratur.

Juratores dicunt super sacramentum suum quod revera aliquo tempore prædicta Juliana feofavit prædictam Matildam de prædicto tenemento et per prædictum feofamentum fuit in bona et pacifica seisina prædicti tenementi quousque prædictus Johannes venit et voluit cum prædicta Matilda matrimonium contrahere et tunc prædicti Johannes et Matilda volentes prædictum tenementum vendere venerunt ad prædictam Julianam et prædictum tenementum ei reddiderunt pro viginti marcis quas prædicta Juliana eis dedit et sic ipsa Juliana intravit prædictum tenementum sicut illud quod de prædictis Johanne et Matilda emerat et hoc de bona et expressa voluntate ipsius Matildæ et non per disseisinam quam ipsi Matildæ inde fecerat.

Et ideo consideratum est quod prædicti Johannes et Matilda nihil capiant per hoc breve et prædicta Juliana inde sine die et prædicti Johannes et Matilda in misericordia pro falso clamore. Misericordia xl. s.

Assises of nuisance were entered as follows :—

Assisa venit recognitura si A. injuste, &c., levavit (prostravit) quendam sepem (fossam, haïam, &c.), obstruxit quandam viam, diverit cursum cujusdam aque, levavit, prostravit, exaltavit, vel deexaltavit quoddam stagnum, &c., in tali villâ ad nocumentum liberi tenementi B. in eadem, villa.

Assises of mort d'ancestor as follows :—

Assisa venit recognitura quis advocatus tempore pacis præsentavit ultimam personam quæ mortua est ad ecclesiam de A. quæ vacat et cujus advocacionem B. dicit ad se pertinere et quam C. ei deforciavit, &c.

Many curious particulars are recorded on these Rolls, which are well worthy of being calendered. Among others may be mentioned: The misconduct of one of the recognitors (Thomas de Molendino) in an Assise of Novel Disseisin. He had been removed from the assise by challenge ("per calumpniam") and "altâ voce" coram recognitoribus dixit quod prædictus Rogerus" (the demandant) "fuit in seisinâ de prædicto tenemento unde queritur per quinquennium et hoc dixit ad detrimentum partis adversæ ut per dictum suum juratores informarentur de veredicto suo faciendo." He was amerced for contempt at half a mark.

These amercements were frequently remitted, for various reasons, the most common being the poverty of the person amerced. The most curious ground is probably that alleged in the following case :—

"Et pardonatur pro Deo quia testatur quod libenter audivit missam non obstante aliquo negotio."

This was probably accepted by the Court as evidence of good character. But it could not have been so in the case of William de la Roche who was pardoned, "quia ebrius."

In another case an amercement was remitted because the person amerced was "Clericus Cancellariæ."

The damages assigned in these assises appear to have been given to certain clerks, the whole when the damages were small, in which case the entry in the margin of the roll was, e.g., "Dampna dimidia marca, T.C.," i.e., "Totum Clericis." In cases where the damages were large, only a part was given to them, when the marginal entry was, e.g., "Dampna xl solidi unde C[lericis] i marca."

The entries on Patent Roll, 1 Edward I., excluding these appointments to try special assises, are of varied character and interest. They consist of instruments relating to monastic and ecclesiastical matters, such as congés d'elire to vacant abbeys, bishoprics, and priories; assents to the elections of abbats, bishops, and priors to the same; restitutions of temporalities to an archbishop, abbats, abbesses, bishops, and priors after election; presentations to benefices, either of royal patronage, or which were in the hands of the King for any reason; grants of custodies of abbeys, &c., during voidance; or by reason of what was practically insolvency; of custodies of the lands and wardships of the heirs of tenants in chief of the King; liveries of their inheritance to such heirs as were of full age; commissions, general and special, of inquiry into various matters as to which further evidence was required with a view to the more speedy and complete remedy of wrong; appointments to offices, for life, during pleasure, or at will, and writs of intendence, respotence, and aid to the persons so appointed; instruments relating to the debts due by and to the King; special pardons; mandates to make extents with different objects; an appointment of justices to try an appeal of homicide; the conservation of the King's peace in England and Ireland; protections (special and limited by various clauses) and safe-conducts; a few mandates post mortem; commissions of gaol delivery; and licences for the exportation of wool. There are many instruments on m. 15, m. 5, and m. 4, relating to the assignment of the dower of Alianor the Queen-Mother. Such assignments were generally entered on the Close Rolls.

To give a particular account of every important entry on the roll would be simply to repeat the Calendar. For there is hardly a single entry, which from one or other of the different points of view taken by those persons who consult the Public Records, would not appear important. To take only one instance and the most unpromising of all: the appointments of justices to try special assises, unproductive as they may appear, are a perfect mine of surnames; and in a complete and exhaustive History of Surnames it would be impossible to neglect them.

Some of the miscellaneous entries have been already published, in the "Calendarium Rotulorum Patentium in Turri Londinensi," in Rymer's "Fœdera," and in the "Calendar of Documents relating to Ireland."

Only fifteen are given in the "Calendarium," and these are all taken from membranes (3), (4), and (5) of the roll. This work is no more than "a collection of notes," and cannot be looked upon as a Calendar.

The documents printed in Rymer, though only five in number, are all "important." They are:—1°. The mandate to the Justiciar of Ireland to make proclamation of the King's peace there; 2°. The dedimus potestatem to the bishop of Meath and others to receive the fealty of the men of Ireland; 3°. 4°. The prohibitions of tournaments on m. 15, and m. 17; and, 5°. The proclamation to merchants trading in Ireland.

The entries which refer to Ireland have been translated in the "Calendar of Documents relating to Ireland, 1252-1284" (pp. 162-171). Among these there is one especially noteworthy, since two phrases in it have been interpreted by Sir Edward Coke (Inst. I. cap. v.) in a manner which is hardly to be reconciled with the version given by the learned Editor of the "Calendar." The mandate to William FitzWarin, Seneschal of Ulster, to make extent of the county of Ulster, with a view to the assignment of her reasonable dower to Avelina, the widow of Walter de Burgh, deceased, late Earl of Ulster, contains the phrases "castra . . . . quæ de guerrâ existunt" & "homagia . . . . quæ . . . . sunt de guerrâ." The Editor translates the words "de guerrâ," "hostile." The author of the "Institutes," in support of the doctrine, that: "Of a castle that is maintained for the necessary defence of the realme a woman shall not be indowed" refers to this very entry: from which it may be inferred that he took the words "de guerrâ" to mean "maintained for the defence of the realm." Homages, if we may believe Bracton (Chronicles and Memorials, ii. p. 99) and Britton ("de homages ne deit james dowarie estre assigné."—Liv. 5. c. 3.), were never assigned in dower.

The Editor translates (Calendar, p. 164) the words "in campi partem" "in champerty." They occur in a licence (m. 19.) to the keeper of the see of Dublin, during avoidance, to demise the land thereof to farm or "ad campi partem, prout magis viderit expedire." The phrase "campi pars" is interpreted by Ducange (s.v.): "Fructuum fundi, quam colonus partiaris solvit domino, pars et portio . . . ." The word "champart," by Roquefort (s.v.): "Droit qu'a un seigneur de prendre un certain nombre de gerbes dans la moisson, des tenanciers de sa seigneurie" and he derives it from "campi pars." By Cotgrave (s.v.) the meaning given is: "Part of a crop . . . . due to the landlord and taken off the ground for him before the farmer had any." In fact "champart" was a kind of métayer tenure, or that part of the produce of the land held by such tenure which was due to the lord, or the right of the lord to that part of the produce. "Champerty" on the other hand though the word was derived from "campi pars" was neither a kind of tenure, nor produce arising out of a tenure, nor a right to such produce, but simply an offence against the law.

The entries relating to Wales are only three in number. Two out of the three refer to Llewelyn ab Gruffud. These are: the acquittance to him of the sum due from him to the King by the conditions of the peace entered into between Henry III., Edward, and himself in A.D. 1267 (Rymer, p. 474); and the dedimus potestatem to the abbots of Dore and Haghem to receive the fealty of the Prince.

There is an inconsistency between the first of these two instruments and an entry on the Close Roll, 1 Edward I. m. 11., which is worthy of some notice; especially as the entry on the Patent Roll has misled so eminent an historian as Dr. Pauli (Geschichte von England, iv. p. 3, Note 1).

No. 3.—Calendar of Patent Rolls : 1 Edward I.—continued.

The acquittance is dated 25th November [A.D. 1272], and testifies to the receipt by the King of the 3,000 marks due to him from Llewelyn at the Nativity following. On the 2nd December [A.D. 1272], the date of the entry on the Close Roll, and just a week after the date of the acquittance, the King commands the Prince to pay this very sum to the abbat of Chester, and Alan, a monk of Chester, by Christmas Day [A.D. 1272] at furthest, promising to send letters patent of acquittance, which will be handed over to the Prince on receipt of the money from him, by the messenger who carried them. A reference to two entries dated 6th February on the Patent Roll, 2 Edward I. m. 22, shows that neither the 3,000 marks due at the Nativity, 1 Edward I., nor the 3,000 marks due at the same feast in the following year had been discharged by Llewelyn at a date subsequent to 6th February, 2 Edward I. [A.D. 1274-5]. The Prince was most probably unable to raise the money. The acquittance so enrolled was probably that mentioned in the entry on the Close Roll.

The second entry relating to Wales is the Dedimus potestatem, already mentioned, to receive the fealty of Llewelyn. From a document printed in Rymer (p. 499), it appears that the Prince did not meet the abbats of Dore and Hagheman at the appointed time and place. This was the first of those lamentable and fruitless breaches of faith, which ultimately led to the invasion and conquest of Wales by Edward in A.D. 1277, and to Llewelyn's own death in A.D. 1282.

There are many illustrations on the Patent Roll, 1 Edward I., of the disturbed state of the kingdom, and a few of Edward's pressing need of ready money.

On the 23rd November [A.D. 1272] a mandate for the proclamation of the King's peace throughout England was attested by his locum-tenentes Walter Archbishop of York, &c. It is addressed to the sheriff of York, with concurrent mandates to the sheriffs throughout England (Rymer, p. 497). Nearly seven months afterwards (6th June, A.D. 1273) we find (m. 16.) a precept in the strongest terms to the sheriff of Surrey and Sussex to be diligent in the conservation of the peace in his ballivate, since it appeared from the complaints of many persons that robberies, homicides, and so forth, were committed in those counties by evil-doers dwelling therein and going about in those parts. Under the same date there is a mandate to the men of Surrey and Sussex to diligently assist the sheriff in this business. The marginal heading of these two entries is : "De conservatione pacis per Angliam" and the omission of the concurrent precept to each of the sheriffs throughout England ("Eodem modo præceptum est singulis vicecomitibus per Angliam") was probably due to the fact that there was no room for it on the membrane, at the end of which the instruments which it would have naturally followed, are enrolled. On the Close Roll of the same year, however (m. 5), we find two exactly similar entries addressed to the sheriff and the men of Dorsetshire, with the concurrent precept "singulis vicecomitibus per Angliam." These precepts may, of course, have been merely formal, and it is just possible that the King's peace may not have been broken between A.D. 1272 and A.D. 1275 "by more than merely local tumults." But on m. 18 there is a mandate to Thomas de Clare to make special inquisition as to the homicides, murders, &c., committed after the proclamation of the King's peace in Norfolk and Suffolk, dated 2nd February [A.D. 1272-3] and on the corresponding Close Roll (m. 9) is a letter to the Mayor and Bailiff of the City of London referring to a mandate lately addressed to them that they should not permit the entrance into the city of any persons with horses and arms, or even of any persons who should be in any way suspected persons. Further we find the disturbed state of Dunwich indicated by the appointment of Thos. de Clare and William de Weylaund to make inquisition touching the discords in that town; and the state of Norwich, a result, no doubt, of the attack on the monastery by the burgesses (Chronicles and Memorials, Bartholomew Cotton, pp. 146-149) is shown by an entry on m. 20. The robbery of the Florentine merchants of 1,000 marks (m. 20d.), and other robberies with respect to which special inquiries are ordered, the attacks upon the constable of Scarborough Castle and his men by the burgesses of Scarborough (m. 11d.), belong perhaps to the ordinary state of the kingdom; but the absolute prohibition of all tournaments, jousts, &c., at any time or place (m. 15, m. 17, m. 18) probably point to a fear, on the part of Edward's locum-tenentes, of some revival of the "tempus turbationis in regno Angliæ." It is known also that Edward's return to England was opposed by a strong party in the north. Matthew of Westminster (Ed. 1601. p. 403), records that : "Quidam Angli excandescentes invidia et furore . . . dicebant Eadwardum nunquam in Angliam reversurum. "Hi . . . usque ad numerum 300 loricatum, exceptis peditibus, et inermibus equitibus, in partibus Borealibus convenerunt." They were put down by a very large force under the command of Edmund, the King's brother, and Roger de Mortimer.

The King's want of money is mentioned, with amusing directness, in some of the entries which refer to sums due to him, e.g., in the writs to the sheriff of Kent, and to the sheriffs throughout England (m. 18). The phrase employed, "quia ad præsens pecuniæ plurimum indigemus," is the same as that which is used in the mandate to Llewelyn on the Close Roll already mentioned.

Edward had in truth succeeded not only to an unstable throne but to an empty exchequer. And his impecuniosity was destined to be life-long. On the whole, however, the method adopted by him for the satisfaction of his necessities was an improvement on the methods—or rather the no-methods—of his predecessors. He had, in fact, learned prudence in the hard, but health-giving, school of adverse fortune, and except on rare occasions (in A.D. 1294, A.D. 1297, and A.D. 1300) he never adopted means which were not within, and well within, the bounds of right, according to law, for obtaining the supplies which he certainly needed, and he generally kept his engagements. The great legal improvements which he carried out may have been mainly due (as we have been informed on very high authority)* to a desire to fill the royal treasury; but he certainly gave his subjects something in return for what he exacted from them, and the question is not so much whether he sold justice as whether the justice which he sold was genuine. That it was so, the testimony of all the greatest legal historians is unanimous in asserting.

The remaining entries worthy of particular notice are:—The two special commissions of inquiry into the liability of the citizens of Canterbury to amercement, during the voidance of the archbishopric, for escapes of felons who had taken refuge in the churches of that city. One of these is entered on m. 14, and dated 1st March [A.D. 1273-4]; the other on m. 18, and tested:—"In ejus, &c. Dat', &c." The entry next above it, which has a date, is dated on 13th March [A.D. 1273-4], and that next below it (on m. 17) on the 20th March [A.D. 1273-4]. The only material difference between the two instruments is the substitution of the words, applied to Seyton and his colleagues, "Justitiiarii nostri ultimo Itinerantes in Comitatu Kancie," in the latter, for the words, "Justitiiarii domini Henrici Regis patris nostri ultimo Itinerantes in Comitatu Kancie," in the former. There can be little doubt that the entry on m. 14 is the more correct, if it be true that (Chronicles and Memorials, Annals of Winchester, A.D. 1273, p. 118) on 14th January A.D. 1273-4, in a meeting of the "magnates" "provisum est quod nulli sint justitiiarii itinerantes usque ad adventum principis, sed in banco."

The entries which relate to commerce are not numerous, but, considering the scantiness of the authentic materials available for a history of economic progress in the early period which the following Calendar covers, they are all well worthy of detailed discussion. It would, perhaps, be out of place to treat them here at any length. But there is one division of them, the licences to export wool, which certainly merit more than a passing notice.

A personal quarrel (it was little more) between Henry III. and Margaret of Flanders led to a most injurious restriction on a very important branch of English trade, the trade in wool. "Wool," says Sir Matthew Hale ("A Treatise in three parts" in Hargrave's "Collection of tracts relating to the Law of England, from manuscripts . . ." Dublin, 1787, vol. i. p. 115, &c.), "was the basis of all the commerce of England," and the chief source of the wealth of the merchants resident there, from whom her rulers obtained in one way or another the ready money of which they were almost always in want. And the principal export-trade in wool was carried on with Flanders. In A.D. 1270, the exportation of wool to Flanders was prohibited by Henry III., (Liber de Antiquis Legibus (Camden Society) pp. 126-7; and Patent Roll, 55 Henry III. m. 7. to m. 10., for the licences to export it) as a retaliation for the seizure by the Countess of the goods of Englishmen in Flanders, which was itself a reprisal for acts of violence committed against the Flemings by the subjects of Henry, and for the non-payment of an annual income, alleged to be due to her. The export of wool to parts beyond seas was, from A.D. 1270 to A.D. 1274, permitted only to those who were prepared to make oath in very stringent terms (m. 14d.), and who, having done so, obtained a patent licensing them to export a certain number of sacks, generally twenty. These licences (m. 7, m. 8, m. 8d., m. 14d.) throw considerable light on the wool trade of the thirteenth century, a subject well worthy of detailed study by antiquarians and economists. What the revenue produced by the purchase of the licences amounted to, it is almost impossible to discover, but about a thousand of them, more or less, are entered on the roll, legalising the exportation of very nearly 30,000 sacks. The actual amount of wool exported must, however, have been much greater than this, for it is quite clear, from entries on the Patent Roll, 2 Edw. I., that the greed of the merchants was stronger than their fear of the law, and that the prohibition was constantly evaded, even with the connivance of the officials at the outports. A mandate to the sheriff of Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire (Rymer, 510) proves that this was the case and also shews, as might have been expected, that these evasions produced, not repeal nor relaxation, but increased severity. By the 2nd April, 2 Edward I., all exportation whatsoever of wool, even into Scotland, Wales, or Ireland had been entirely inhibited. Five years after the reconciliation, in A.D. 1274, between Edward I. and the Count of Flanders, and when the restriction on the export of wool to Flanders had been removed, and four years after the imposition of a duty of 6s. 8d. on every sack of exported wool by the Parliament of Westminster the First the export trade had fallen to about 24,000 sacks yearly (Hale in Hargrave's Tracts, i. 154), reaching the level of the licensed exportation of 1 Edward I. in one year only between 7 & 16 Edward I. (Hale, ib.). For later years of Edward the Customs Rolls of the Pipe afford valuable, but not continuous information. And by means of these little known but most interesting records, we are enabled to correct the often-quoted estimate given by Misselden in his "Circle of Commerce" (London, 1628, p. 119), of the number of sacks of wool exported in 28 Edward III. This quaintest of economical writers gives, from a manuscript founded on a Record in the Exchequer, which he says he had seen in many hands, and of which he possessed a copy, 31,651 as the number of sacks of wool exported from England in that year. An examination of the Customs Rolls however shews that Misselden's estimate is below the truth. The number of sacks charged with the "Antiqua Custuma" of a half-mark on the sack in the ports of Boston, Berwick-on-Tweed, Bristol, Chichester, Exeter, Ipswich, Yarmouth, Kingston-on-Hull, London, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Southampton, and Sandwich was, very nearly, 45,000 in 28 Edward III. The greatest number of sacks (22,795) passed the port of London, the smallest (28½) that of Bristol.

A few matters of detail remain to be noticed.

An attempt has been made to identify with their modern equivalents the places under which, as leading names, the appointments of justices to try special assises have been entered in the Calendar. But the attempt, as might have been anticipated, has not proved completely successful, and several names of places remain in their antique form. A list is appended of more or less conjectural identifications which, as being conjectural, have not been introduced into the Calendar.

The names of the judges appointed to try the special assises are most of them well known. But there is some uncertainty about one of them. Whether the justice of the K. B. whom I have generally called Robert Fulton was Robert "Fulcon," or Robert "Fultonis," or "Fulconis," is matter of doubt. On the Assise Rolls, whenever the surname is extended it is written "Fultonis" or "Fulconis" (the two are undistinguishable in early writing). But the occasional contraction "Fulk," "Fuk," or "Fulck" on the Patent Roll, 1 Edward I., renders "Fulconis" the more probable form. It is not at all unlikely that "Fulconis" was an abbreviation of "filius Fulconis," or "Fitz-Fulk."

I have introduced two innovations, one of which requires to be not only explained but excused. Such names as "Johanna filia Roberti" I have translated "Joan Fitz-Robert" in order to save space. But I beg it to be understood that I do not consider "Fitz" to be equivalent to "filia." I have also invariably treated writs of intendment and respondence as distinct from appointments and grants. That they are so is clear, not only from the occasional mention in these writs of the appointments in pursuance of which they were issued, but by the enrolment of the two instruments as distinct, and even, occasionally, in different parts of the same roll. These writs are, however, often the only evidence of the appointments.

All dated instruments are to be supposed to be given "Per manum Walteri de Merton Cancellarii Regis," unless other names are mentioned.

In the final revision of this portion of the Calendar I have been assisted by my colleague, Mr. Harley Rodney. I have much pleasure in acknowledging the great value of his services.

No. 5.—MR. SANDERS' ANNUAL REPORT, for 1880, on FAC-SIMILES of ANGLO-SAXON CHARTERS, &c., photozincographed at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton.

Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton,
March 1st, 1881.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to submit to you the following report upon the work performed at this office under my superintendence during the past year.

The whole of the Exeter collection of Anglo-Saxon Charters has been transferred to zinc, and the full edition of fac-similes passed through the press. Those of Westminster and Wells have also been transferred and the full edition will be completed shortly. Towards the close of last year I returned the MSS. lent by the Bishop and the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, to their respective depositories.

On the 15th December last the First Commissioner of Works, on the recommendation of the Director-General of the Ordnance Survey, applied to the Lords of the Treasury for leave to add to the volume of fac-similes containing the above collections the few others that I have as yet been able to discover as still existing in England, and their Lordships have been pleased to sanction the First Commissioner's application. The several owners of these MSS. will therefore be asked to allow them to be copied for this purpose.

I think that I have said in a former report that some of the Confessor's charters supply the information expressed under the "T.R.E." of Domesday Book, but a curious instance of the quotation of a previous grant of even greater antiquity occurred to me while engaged with the Exeter MSS. In that portion of Domesday Book which relates to Devonshire, and among the estates belonging to the Church of Exeter at the time of the taking of the Great Survey, is the Manor of Newton held with that of Crediton, appended to the record of which is the remarkable addition: "De hoc manerio ostendit Osbernus Episcopus "cartas suas quæ testantur Ecclesiam Sancti Petri inde fuisse saisitam "antequam Rex Edwardus regnaret. Insuper tempore Regis Willielmi "diratiocinavit coram Baronibus Regis esse suam."" A charter of Æthelstan, granting a hide of land in Newton to St. Peter's of Exeter, more than 100 years before King Edward came to the throne, is among those belonging to Exeter, and is probably in substance one of the charters displayed by Bishop Osbern to the Conqueror's Commissioners as evidence of the rights of his Church.

The present volume will contain fac-similes of between 50 and 60 charters. Among these, the two large charters belonging to Westminster are conspicuous as showing the capabilities of photozincography in the reproduction of ancient manuscripts. The boundaries are as usual of great topographical interest; those quoted in charters of land in the neighbourhood of London are perhaps especially so.

In my next report I hope to be able to give in detail the particulars of the additional charters which the Treasury has authorised to be included in the volume.

I have also been occupied in making a Calendar, with Indices, to the Close Rolls for the years 4 & 5 Edw. I.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

William Hardy, Esq.
&c. &c.

(Signed)

Deputy Keeper of H.M.'s Records.

WILLIAM BASEVI SANDERS,
Assistant Keeper of Her Majesty's Records.
